Come walk with me through ninety-three years of rich memories, personal stories, and reflections of years past. Time gives a glow to such memories. Each story of varied experiences emphasizes the fact that the storms that come in life can be overcome when God walks beside me. God has not left my side as my journey in life has led me through valleys and mountaintop paths. Reminiscing has given life again to the hopes of youth, rekindled the joys of realized dreams, and uprooted the depths of buried sorrow. But God has not left my side. I pray that these pages will charm you, uplift you, and give you hope as you witness the magic in life only God can provide. You too can walk with him.

SYLVIA ENGEN ESPE, retired from a career in heath care, lives in Camrose, Alberta. Her freelance nonfiction writing involvement began in the early teen years, and actively continues to this day. She has published a book, and numerous articles, including award-winning articles, in various periodicals. Photography and travelling are also of interest. But her family, relatives, and friends bring her keen joy.
